

1790 FEDERAL CENSUS
ADAMS COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA
A STUDY

Introduction

The first federal census, in its book form published in 1908, presents difficulties to researchers of the western portion of York County, Pennsylvania, that segment which a decade later would become Adams County. Many names as transcribed have unusual spellings; some are nearly unrecognizable as Adams County names. And for some reason census officials recorded names in two blocks of several townships each under group headings, with no apparent clue to individual residence. In one grouping are Huntington, Manheim, Menallen, and Tyrone Townships; in another are Berwick, Cumberland, Franklin, Germany, Hamiltonban, Heidelberg, Mt. Joy, Mt. Pleasant, and Straban. Only Monaghan, Reading, and Warrington are treated singly.

This study attempts to more clearly identify the 1790 heads of families in the future Adams County and to more closely define their townships of residence. Its basis is the 1908 transcription of the census, augmented by the microfilmed original of that census and by available tax lists of 1789 and 1792.

In delineating the border separating Adams County from its parent in 1800, six townships were split. Huntington and Reading became township names in the new county, while Heidelberg, Manheim, Monaghan, and Warrington remained divisions of York County. In 1790 therefore, only some of the people in those townships lived in territory which would later be part of Adams County. This work does not try to identify those people by county; the complete register of the six townships is shown. There is some built-in assistance however: tax records separate residents of Hanover and of McSherrystown from the rest of Heidelberg Township and that distinction is included here; that provides a partial resolution since Hanover is in York County and McSherrystown is in Adams.

A refinement is made too in singling out residents of Berwick Town (now Abbottstown) from the remainder of Berwick Township, but in that instance all were in the future Adams County.

A comparison of the book version of the 1790 census with the original rolls reveals numerous, important differences. Many names in the original are clearly not as transcribed; many others are probably different, although not as surely. All discerned disparate spellings are included.

It is apparent that a pattern of sorts was followed in recording the multiple-township listings. A number of people in one township, anywhere from just a handful to over two hundred, are recorded consecutively, followed in turn by groups from other townships. There also appear at times to be deviations from that pattern. So, although individuals not found in the tax records consulted can usually be safely placed with the people listed just before and just after them, that cannot always be presumed to be proper procedure. Seemingly duplicated entries occasionally add to the problem. Therefore, there remain about ninety names that have defied reasonable placement.

Since the scope of this study has been a limited one, for many entries the evidence is not conclusive; those entries are followed by question marks. Nevertheless, often the details shown are known to be accurate or easily ascertained with the use of other resources. It is suggested that further investigation will likely prove profitable in determining what cannot be concluded with certainty here.

The index which follows shows for each person: the census name as transcribed in 1908, the original census name (if read differently—this in brackets), a more recent or more common spelling of the name (usually only if significantly modified or if an actually different name is indicated by tax information and usually added only to the first of a series of the same or similar spellings), township of residence, and as a convenience the census enumeration. Additionally, in those cases in which an actual or amended name might escape detection, a more familiar or corrected spelling is inserted in the appropriate place alphabetically, along with a reference to the 1908 version of the name.

Abbreviations for the townships and for the towns recorded separately in Berwick and Heidelberg Townships:

Ber = Berwick
B/BT = Berwick Town (Abbottstown)
Cum = Cumberland
Fra = Franklin
Ger = Germany
Ham = Hamiltonban
Hei = Heidelberg
H/H = Hanover
H/M = McSherrystown
Hun = Huntington
Mnh = Manheim
Men = Menallen
Mgn = Monaghan
MJ = Mt. Joy
MP = Mt. Pleasant
Rea = Reading
Str = Straban
Tyr = Tyrone
War = Warrington.

For those persons whose home township is unidentified:

n. p. = not placed.

The five columns of the enumeration represent, in order:

males aged 16 years and over

males under 16

females

other free persons

slaves.
